The booming Bondi Beach butcher where you choose a steak at the counter and they cook it for you is about to get a whole lot bigger. Macelleria is relocating to the Pacific Bondi development on Campbell Parade next month.

"We'll be a lot larger, but we want to be really careful not to change anything fundamental," says owner Peter Zaidan. "We'll keep on doing what has worked, offering good quality meat at approachable prices".

The butcher-turned-restaurateur plans to relocate in early April. The onetime co-owner at Bondi Tratt and Luigi Brothers, Andy Anthony, will join Macelleria as a partner, to bring a little shine to the floor. "Peter's product really sells itself," Anthony tells Good Food.
